TEST RUN OF FIRE TRUCKS IS CANCELLED

The general committee of the Gettysburg fire company, in charge of the community observance of the 86th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, today announced that the test run for county fire companies scheduled for Thursday evening, June 30, has been called off.

State police of the Gettysburg substation called the committee's attention to a provision of the state motor code which prohibits speed tests, and makes drivers who take part in them subject to prosecution as reckless drivers.

The fire company had planned a test run for all county fire companies and had set up rules for the contest, under which each fire truck would be timed from its borough line to Center square here. Prizes had been offered for the best time made, based on a mileage basis.

Police Cite Dangers

State police pointed out the danger of such a test run over the public highways, that a speeding fire truck might strike another vehicle or a pedestrian, or the trucks might leave the road, upset or otherwise have a serious accident.

Police authorities said they had no wish to interfere or hamper the anniversary program, but felt that the dangers involved in a test run outweighed its value as a program attraction. They suggested that the committee reconsider its plan and substitute a safer form of contest.

James S. Shenk, co-chairman of the general committee, said today a meeting of the committee would be held the first of the week to make new plans, and that county fire companies would be notified immediately of the change.

Scout Troop 76 Builds Own Meeting Place; Hit Snag On Fund Raising Efforts Here

The Rev. Floyd A. Carroll, member of the committee of Boy Scout Troop 76, points to the new scout building being erected along North Fourth street.

Gettysburg Boy Scout Troop 76, sponsored by the local Methodist and Christ Lutheran congregations, is building a new meeting place in the woods along the east side of Fourth street, just north of the Tiber.

Completion of the 25 by 40 foot frame structure is expected by fall, after which the troop will move in and utilize the building entirely for its own purposes. The new scout cabin is being built from the lumber, framework and the like secured from the old Officers Quarters building, of the abandoned CCC camp on West Confederate avenue.

So far the only "hired help" needed in connection with the building has been a carpenter and his helper who set up the framework for the structure. The Boy Scouts, under the direction of Jack Cessna, chairman of the troop committee, tore down the officers quarters.

Voluntary Contributions To Warner Hospital Help Erase Operating Deficit And Keep Fine Service At Minimum Cost

The Annie M. Warner hospital is not only pre-eminent as the medical and health center for Adams county, but it has also achieved a high position in the economic affairs of the county. This was revealed in the annual report for the fiscal year ending May 31, the review of which was the chief item of business to come before the hospital directors at their regular monthly meeting Friday evening.

As a medical and health center the hospital admitted 3,210 patients during the year. The average stay was 7.89 days for a total of 25,277 patient days of hospital service. The average number of patients in the hospital each day during the fiscal year was 69.19. The cost of serving them was $8.35 per day.

Spend Money In County

The magnitude of the hospital as an Adams county business operation is emphasized by the fact that $244,438.68 was spent to operate the institution during the year starting June 1, 1948 and ending May 31, 1949. Of this amount only $45,548.61 was spent with firms outside of Adams county and with firms not having local representation in the county. Of this amount $34,236.93 was expended for hospital textiles, medical and surgical supplies, drugs, surgical instruments and equipment not procurable in the county.

The Warner hospital has developed into a quarter million dollar business that redistributes better than 80 per cent of its income locally. Fifteen per cent of its income must be spent outside the county for equipment and supplies not procurable locally leaving but 5 per cent that is diverted from local channels, that could be spent here but is spent elsewhere only because it is to the specific advantage of the hospital to do so.

PASTORS ASKED TO HELP FRESH AIR COMMITTEE

Rev. Dr. Ralph R. Gresh, pastor of St. James Lutheran church, chairman of the Adams County Fresh Air committee, has addressed an appeal to all clergymen in the county asking their cooperation in finding homes for 30 underprivileged children from the tenement districts of New York for a two weeks' vacation in Adams county this summer.

Doctor Gresh's letter, which is self-explanatory, follows:

"Adams county has again been asked to provide homes for a two week period this summer for a group of boys and girls from the tenement section of New York City.

Underprivileged Children

"These children come from an environment altogether different from ours. They are not ragged and starving—welfare agencies now make it unnecessary for any human being actually to starve—many of them still suffer from malnutrition because their parents do not know enough, or cannot afford, to buy the variety of food a young child needs. More of them suffer emotionally because of a lack of security, of the affection and guidance that they crave. A great many of them run the risk of bad influences from the streets on which they play. In short, they are underprivileged children.

"There is practically no limit to (Please Turn to Page 2)

Operating Deficit

The earned income of the hospital for the fiscal year was $247,659.33 while expenses charged against the operation totaled $258,319.66 resulting in an operating deficit of $10,660.33. This was reduced to $6,401.35 by crediting $4,258.98 in equipment purchased for the hospital by the Women's Auxiliary and others from their own funds.

In connection with these figures, the annual report called attention to the fact that the income figures are earned income, that is, with the services rendered in the various departments computed as if the hospital were to be paid for all services at established charges.

The cash statement presented a different picture. During the year the hospital received $216,778.22 from in-patients, out-patients and as reimbursement for telephone charges and special meals and rental of the state clinic room. It paid out $243,065.68 or $26,287.46 more than it received during the year.

The deficiency of $26,287.46 was provided by appropriations of $2,000 (Please Turn to Page 2)

Gettysburg Described As An 'American Epic' By Magazine

Coronet magazine for July, now on the newsstands, devotes 18 pages of the issue to Gettysburg, the events leading up to the battle here on July 1, 2 and 3, 1863, the battle itself and an epilogue. Sixteen of the 18 pages are pictures by Matthew Brady, Civil War photographer, and others, showing scenes at Gettysburg and elsewhere.

Entitled "Gettysburg—An American Epic," Lawrence Elliott, who wrote the narrative matter, declares that "Gettysburg, which led inevitably to the collapse of the Confederacy, was indeed an epic event."

"Role Of Chance"

"Historians still debate the role of chance at Gettysburg," writes Elliott. "Neither commander wanted to fight there, but in the tides of war, the unforeseen becomes the reality. . . . Today men ask what would have happened if Jeb Stuart had not raced off on a cavalry raid, robbing Lee of the eyes of his armies? What if Stonewall Jackson had still been alive to demonstrate his tactical wizardry? . . . What if Lee had heeded a subordinate's warning that Pickett's troops were doomed? . . . And Northerners were

Hospital Report

Diane Kleppinger, 7, Fairfield, suffered a fracture of her left forearm in a fall from a porch Friday evening. She was treated at the Warner hospital.

The following were operated upon this morning for the removal of their tonsils: Nancy Scott, Gettysburg R. 2; Donald and Daniel Collins, Littlestown; Nancy Lee Carbaugh, 148 Hanover street; Carolyn Baker, Biglerville, and Donna Jean Myers, Fairfield.

Admissions: Miss Emma Trostle, 114 Chambersburg street; Mrs. Kenneth Merrihan, Westminster R. 7; Mrs. Lee Byers, New Oxford R. 1; and Judy Ann Horick, Idaville. Discharges: Mary Louise Essig, Taneytown; Mrs. Theron Cromer and infant son, of Littlestown; Clarence M. Shindedecker, 135 West Middle street; Mrs. Claude Winand, New Oxford; Mrs. Herbert Miller and infant daughter, of Dillsburg R. 2; Mrs. John Lobaugh and infant daughter, of Gardners R. 1; Milmore Bream, Biglerville; Mrs. Lucy Galt, Emmitsburg; Mrs. Kenneth Jacobs and infant son, of Gettysburg R. 4; Richard Cyle, Jr., 143 Breckenridge street; Carolyn and Rodger Hull, Biglerville R. 1; Grace Heck, 344 South Washington street; Paul and Dean Steiner, Flora Dale, and Donna Coldsmit, 129 North Stratton street.

Administration, housekeeping, laundry, plant operation, maintenance and fixed charges took only 23.2 cents of the hospital dollar while specific hospital and medical services, including nursing, dietary, pharmacy, X-ray, medical and surgical supplies, laboratory, anesthesia, dispensary and charity cases took the remaining 76.8 cents of the hospital dollar, the report revealed.

The directors congratulated Administrator Walter R. Doud and his staff for the fine service being maintained at the hospital and the fine operation they are giving the people of Adams county. Resolutions of thanks were also conveyed to the First National bank of Gettysburg, the Gettysburg National bank and the Littlestown National bank, the three institutions administering the endowment and trust funds of the hospital. The small endowment and trust funds, aggregating a little over $48,000, earned sufficient income to reduce the bank loans of the hospital from $10,500 to $8,719.69 and to pay interest charges of $428.85.

Although study of the annual report took nearly all of the directors time, the board adopted a resolution inviting the Women's Auxiliary to send a representative to the board meetings as a means of maintaining proper liaison between the hospital and the important auxiliary program for the hospital.

In the absence of President Bixler, Carl A. Baum, vice president, presided over the meeting which was attended by H. Harold Miller, Richard A. Brown, Joseph E. Codori, William Durbarow, Father Mark E. Stock, Dr. Frank H. Kramer and Henry M. Scharf, all of Gettysburg; Wilbur Bankert and William Sneringer, of Littlestown; Guy Stock, Bendersville; C. P. Keefer, New Oxford, and John Brown, Fairfield. Also attending were Dr. R. W. Gifford, from the medical staff; Administrator Doud, and C. Samuel Daley, accountant, who maintains supervision of the fiscal affairs of the hospital and presents monthly and annual reports to the directors.

The directors adopted a resolution of thanks to Mr. Daley for his work in behalf of the hospital. Complete details of the financial report of the hospital will be published in next Friday's issue of The Gettysburg Times.

from the Adams County commissioners and $5,250.00 from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; donations of $2,258.98 from the Women's auxiliary and others and $17,147.02 from contributions received from thousands of Adams countians in response to the letter campaign being carried on by the hospital. In this connection the report stated:

Fine Cooperation
"Never has there been a better sample of the value of the interest and active support of the people of the community than the response to these letters. There can be no clearer manifestation of the force and effect of modest contributions of thousands of people. In the past 18 months, nearly 10,000 contributions aggregating $23,000 have been made to the hospital and it is these contributions that have enabled the hospital to function on its recognized high standard at rates that are among the lowest in the country."

"The contributions that have been received through these letters and through the efforts of the Women's auxiliary have made it possible to render complete hospital service, on the very highest standard, but with one slight increase in rates since long before the war."

"The support given the hospital in response to the letters and by the Women's Auxiliary, through its various projects, are demonstrations of the highest degree of good citizenship. These two sources, which are entirely separate, represent the only local money-raising activities for operating purposes."

Fine Service, Low Cost
"They should never diminish or fall. These two sources of revenue make it possible for the hospital to render high grade medical service at rates and charges that are among the lowest to be found anywhere. A decrease in this revenue would necessarily curtail the medical service and would be a severe loss to the public, even greater than the consequences resulting from the loss of the financial assistance."

Administration, housekeeping, laundry, plant operation, maintenance and fixed charges took only 23.2 cents of the hospital dollar while specific hospital and medical services, including nursing, dietary, pharmacy, X-ray, medical and surgical supplies, laboratory, anesthesia, dispensary and charity cases took the remaining 76.8 cents of the hospital dollar, the report revealed.

PASTORS ASKED

what we can do for children like these. We can make them feel they have found new friends whom they can trust and rely upon. Some of them are desperately in need of love and care. We can educate them in the joys of a more stable and natural life. We can make them aware of the beauties of our country, of its rivers, its lakes, its history, its industry, its farms. So much more is involved than merely taking in a two weeks' guest.

Need Homes For 30
"Here in Adams county we have been asked to provide for 30 of these children. The children range in age from 5 to 12 years. They represent all the religious faiths, the various nationalities and races which are found in New York. However, Negro children are only sent to homes which request them."

"The children will arrive in Gettysburg on August 5 and remain for two weeks. The Fund pays railroad fare and takes care of escorting arrangements and expenses; it also pays all medical expenses. The only cost to the home that takes the children is that of food. Homes taking children may specify approximate age and sex of child desired and, of course, can request a child previously entertained. They may also specify religion."

"Will you kindly make the appeal for homes in your parish, church or Sunday school, and forward to me the names of people willing to be hosts?"

MANY SEEKING PUBLIC OFFICE

Pre-primary politics in Adams county moved into high today, the first day that petitions may be signed for candidates for the various offices.

Mrs. Emma Sheffer, Chambersburg street, clerk of courts, and Joseph W. Cooley, Biglerville R. 1, Menallen township, both began circulating petitions as candidates for the Republican nomination for county clerk of courts. Mrs. Sheffer was appointed to the post upon the death of her husband, Howard Sheffer, several years ago, and later was re-elected. Cooley has been turnkey at the county jail for the past nine years.

Sheriff Dorsey J. Shultz, Bernard Murray and Melvin Spence, who previously had announced as candidates for sheriff on the Republican ticket, were active in obtaining signatures to their petitions, as was George P. Taylor, who previously had announced for associate judge.

It was reported petitions for a Sunday movies vote were being prepared in Littlestown. One candidate for school board moved too rapidly and forwarded his petition, duly signed and attested, to the county election board today. The petition will be returned to the candidate who will be told that all signatures must be placed after June 25 and that all petitions must be in the hands of the county election board by 4 p. m. July 25.

COURT OUTLAWS TAX ON MINING

Philadelphia, June 25 (AP)—School district taxation on revenues from mining and transporting of coal is unconstitutional, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court has ruled.

The ruling, handed down yesterday, is expected to settle once and for all the coal tax issue in the Keystone state.

Th 1949 legislature exempted coal from taxation under a 1947 act, but the ban is not operative until the end of this year.

The coal tax rulings came in one of the high tribunal's busiest days. The court handed down 49 decisions and heard arguments in several others.

Justice Horace J. Stern in two opinions wrote that the court declared "invalid and void" taxes imposed on coal by the Centerville borough school district in Washington county and the Hampton township school district in Allegheny county. Justice Charles A. Jones dissented in both 6-1 decisions.

In 1947 the Pennsylvania legislature passed a law giving municipalities the power to tax anything not already taxed by the state.

Stern said both school districts violated the "tax anything" law.

Aces Defeated By Mt. Holly Nine 7-3

Lindsey, Mt. Holly hurler, permitted but three hits. Noggle pounded out a long homer for the visitors in the fifth. George Kennell's triple was the hardest blow for the Aces.

Expect 35,000 For Wimbledon Matches

London, June 25 (AP)—Wimbledon tennis officials prepared for a sell-out crowd of 35,000 for today's matches in which 16 men battle for berths in the singles quarter-finals.

Among the 16 are eight seeded performers but there's at least a fair chance that a couple of them may be eliminated. The experts would not be too surprised should the United States singles king, Richard (Pancho) Gonzales of Los Angeles, and Eric Sturgess, South Africa's best, bow out.

Gonzales, seeded second, comes up against Australian Geoff Brown, who hits a tennis ball harder than any other player here. Sturgess meets Stuyvesant Gianni Cucelli, Italy's Mr. Tennis.

Cucelli, a Davis cupper and Italy's foremost player for the past three years, has the strokes, power and stamina to give Sturgess an unpleasant session.

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
THE JOY OF ADVENTURE

Who can estimate the debt we owe to those who have adventured that we might enjoy all that we do? Every convenience that is ours today is the product of someone's adventure. It's the spirit of adventure that drives us all on. We can make every day an adventure. We can even adventure in our mind. That's where the plans are made.

It's getting into action with our plans or dreams that puts the joy into any of our adventures. And every adventure seems to stimulate another. That's what kept Admiral Peary persisting after many attempts, until he had nailed the Stars and Stripes to the North Pole. Peary experienced the joy of adventure, as has many another explorer and pioneer.

Life itself is the greatest of all adventures, and we should early learn to extract the joy from it. We must get and keep the spirit of adventure in our hearts. So that each new day may be a promised adventure, carried out with hope and enthusiasm.

Many years ago there were inspiring volumes published every few years, with intriguing titles. "Adventures in Contentment," "Adventures in Understanding," and "Adventures in Friendship." These books were written by Ray Stannard Baker under the pen name of David Grayson, and were widely read. They are just as inspiring to read as when first published. Of all the adventures in life, what ones can compare with those in the realm of friendship?

That vacation of yours can be made an adventure in more ways than one. Every trip away from home may be made into a profitable adventure. Never do we see the same thing twice in the same way, so that even though we have been to some place before, it can be new at subsequent times, and an adventure all over again.

The mind is always on the wing—adventuring into the minds and hearts of others, through contact with them, or through the medium of their books. The joy of adventure with a friend is the supreme of all adventures. Memory opens the door anew to each adventure, so that it really never quite ends!

Just Folks

A DAY
From sleep to wake,
From toil to sleep;
Some things to make;
Accounts to keep;
To sell; to buy;
To teach; to pray;
To laugh; to cry;
For all—a day!

The hours the same
As all before,
And none to claim
One second more.
A date to mark
Each passing day,
From dawn to dark
For work and play.

Yet from the rise
To set of sun
By him who tries
Can much be done.
Before the end
Who will can say:
He dared to spend
A useful day.

STUDY FOREIGN AID REQUEST

Washington, June 25 (AP)—A congress already disputing some parts of the administration's foreign policy today studied a request from President Truman for a new foreign aid program to build up backward countries all over the world.

Specifically, the President wants:

(1) A fund of $45,000,000 to finance American engineering and other assistance to such countries.

(2) Authority for the Export Import bank to guarantee new American private investments in those countries against the risks of loss "peculiar" to foreign financing.

Mr. Truman specified "parts of Africa, the Near and Far East, and certain regions of Central and South America" as regions where the programs would be applied on a share cost basis with local governments.

A special message from the Chief Executive on what he has called his "bold new program" was sent to congress late yesterday. Initially, leaders there were cautious about predicting its chance of passage this session.

Speaker Rayburn said there will be "a great deal of strong support for it on the House floor" if it comes out of committee. Democratic leader McCormack (Mass.) agreed. But they didn't know what the chances of getting it out of committee might be at this point.

Washington, June 25 (AP)—The cost of living nosed slightly downward during the month ended May 15. The Bureau of Labor Statistics said Friday its index declined three-tenths of one per cent for the month. In mid-April the index had advanced slightly, one-tenth of one per cent, over mid-March. Officials said actually there had been no really substantial change for the past two months in the consumers' prices indices covering large cities.

Las Vegas, N. M., June 25 (AP)—"Colonel Teddy's Men" came back Friday to hold what is probably their final convention in the town that saw their first one—back in '39. After half a century, Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders Association was just about at the end of the trail

Says Good Shoes For Children Is Most Important

More than 95 out of every 100 children are born with perfect feet, yet only about 10 per cent reach maturity without having developed some sort of foot trouble.

What happens in the meantime is a problem which is close to every mother's interests, for her children's mental happiness and ability is determined to a large extent by the condition of those very utilitarian and yet very important extremities, the feet.

Foot troubles are in reality only shoe troubles. Perfectly cared for feet do not develop corns, fallen arches, "heel spurs," or any of the many ailments which crop out in the average mature foot. It is improperly fitted, poorly chosen shoes which are the underlying cause of such troubles, and during the danger age of one to 15, when bones are soft and pliable, mothers should particularly watch the choosing of their children's shoes.

A child's foot is tender, supple. It yields easily. A shoe which is too small, too wide, too short, or has some other defect of fitting, is likely to cause the foot to grow in an abnormal fashion.

A few simple rules should be followed in choosing children's shoes.

For the very young children, shoes in which they are to take their first steps should have broad toes and raised forepart, plenty of toe room to take care of growth, and snug heels to prevent slipping and rubbing. Soles should be flexible and a slight raise in the arch is necessary. A baby's foot is pear shaped, with the width in the toes, while the foot tapers back toward the heel, which is narrow and not yet developed. The slight raise in the arch prevents flat feet and the flexible leather counters provides the slight ankle support needed by the child. Even in the smallest sizes, there are wide and narrow feet which require the proper width of shoe.

The wise mother will choose soft and mellow uppers for her children's shoes. Mellow elk tanned leather is one of the most popular leathers for baby's shoes. As a child grows, the weight of soles is increased. The height of the arch and heel is also increased to the proper place, until at the age of eight when the foot will be ready for lasts that are slightly narrower and in style appears more like those worn by older brother or sister.

Proper fitting is the outstanding feature in children's shoes, and this is chiefly accomplished by shoe stylists in an adroit distribution of wood, as well as the proper building of the last, the shape of the soles, and the proper height of upper patterns to hold the foot snugly and still carry style. The addition of a low heel has the effect of causing the child to tread straight.

It is most important that each child's foot be fitted perfectly. Mothers often place the thumb at the toe of the shoe, to see that there is about a half inch of space between the toes and the end of the shoe to allow for normal growth and comfort in walking. The practice sometimes followed by mothers of large families of allowing a small child to wear out shoes outgrown by an older brother or sister is an economy which builds up troubles which will be painful and inconvenient in later years. ## Where We Came In

As motordom gets back to normal it's pleasant to note a return of customs that were plenty of fun not so long ago. Here we are visiting showrooms again, taking demonstrations, shopping around. Nothing makes for better understanding of cars and their newest mechanical features. You get to know the salesman and find that he can be a good friend. Today he is often able to give you a choice of models and sell you what will really serve your purpose best. Many salesmen now have new cars of their own which they can use to excellent advantage to prove how your car will perform when properly broken in.

This will all help to sell cars. It's good for the industry—and a real gain for the automobile enthusiast.

Clears Up A Mystery

While light engine oil burns off more readily than heavier oil the tendency is to assume that it will deposit more carbon. But many a motorist with a "oil burner" has found that this is not necessarily so. The explanation lies in the fact that the lighter oil burns more completely, thus leaving less ash. When oil is too heavy, and pumps into the combustion chambers of the engine, it doesn't burn off as well. That means carbon, just like a too rich fuel mixture.

Fairly Good Record

It is surprising that cooling systems do not form more rust than they do, and it certainly speaks well for the effectiveness of those emulsifying oil rust inhibitors which owners use extensively and which are in the better grades of anti-freeze. Actually a cooling system is plagued with the results of electrolytic action caused by the zinc and copper in the radiator, the other metals in the radiator cap, thermostat housing and the acidity of anti-freeze and even water itself. In their electrolytic order metals found in the cooling system include copper, brass, lead, tin, iron, solder, zinc and aluminum.

It is not generally appreciated that air itself has an effect on these metals when in the presence of water.

Mechanic Joe Speaking

"It seems to strike some customers as odd that a piston should break its top, but even so simple a condition as overheating will produce this condition. Let the motor heat to a point where pistons start to bind and they are seriously strained. The actual fracture, however, may not occur until some time after the overheating. Naturally a point of weakness is where ring grooves have been cut deeper to fit oversize rings. Here's where the mechanic is important because he must not undermine the piston's strength.

"Pistons will also break because of poor lubrication. Shock, as in the case of a real backfire, will also do it."

Stitch In Time

Should the ammeter pointer swing over to the discharge side while the car is running at a normal speed the indications are that the generator has gone on strike, but don't assume that because the battery can carry the load for awhile the situation doesn't call for immediate attention. The trouble with the generator may be such that it will burn itself out if allowed to run. This will be the case if the failure is due to broken leads either inside or outside. The generator will then burn out if continued to be run by the engine.

Try These Sometime

When the car shows a marked tendency to wander while on a summer trip the chances are that the luggage and passenger load are changing front-end caster. A good plan would be to carry the rear tires at a few pounds more pressure, decreasing the front tire pressure an equal amount.

If there is a question as to how gas smells get into the car, close all the windows and cowl ventilator tightly and let the engine idle for fifteen minutes with the car outdoors. Switch off the engine, wait for winds to clear the atmosphere and then open the doors to sniff the air inside the car. Strong gas smell inside will hint of leaks around the toe-board, clutch and brake openings or perhaps around the under-seat car heater.

The Motor Primer

How the rear axles of the car drive the wheels, while simple, still seems to puzzle majority of car owners. They know that rear wheels fit on tapered axle ends but often are misled into believing that the nut which screws the wheel tightly to the axle end provides the actual locking. While tightening is needed to keep the wheels on the axles the actual connection is through the keys in the latter. If it were not for these keys the axles would slip during starting and during the actual work of driving the wheels. For further protection the wheel nuts are held in position with cotter pins.

No Mystery Here

Instead of writing me a letter about it I wish some owners were observing enough to realize that when the instrumental panel gauges doesn't operate there's good reason to suspect that its pointer is merely stuck. Just a tap on the glass will often free it and cause the gauge to go right on with its accustomed work. Many a starting delay is caused by the ignition switch not being fully turned on. These cars certainly can play tricks on the unsuspecting.

Easy To Be Fooled

It's just a simple matter but reading a bayonet type oil level indicator seems to give some motorists plenty of opportunity for error. One common mistake is to read the level when the car isn't on level ground. Another is to check the level when the engine is hot and just switched off. The truest reading is with a cold motor. Where this is impractical at least wait a few minutes for the oil to settle down into the sump (the technical name for the oil pan). The gauge should be withdrawn, wiped off and then re-inserted into the crankcase. This second reading is the correct one.

Q. I had quite a time with the engine overheating but managed to get to a garage. Nothing appears to have been damaged. Do you think I should make any further inspections. M. C. L.

A. No, but I would change the engine oil. Oil, when overheated, may

Announce Winners In Sales Campaign

Winning dealers, parts managers, service managers and truck salesmen in a spring sales campaign conducted in the Harrisburg zone of the Chevrolet Motor division were announced today by J. V. White, zone manager.

The winners from this immediate area are: Warren Chevrolet Sales, Dealer; Glenn A. Bream, parts manager; C. J. Fisher, service manager, and C. E. Raffensperger, salesman, all of Gettysburg.

These men and other campaign winners will attend a victory party on June 30 at the Hershey Park Golf club. The event will be sponsored by the Harrisburg zone Chevrolet Dealers' association. Activities will include swimming, golf, softball, badminton, golf driving, volley ball, horseshoe pitching, ping pong and contests. A buffet luncheon will be served from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. United States Savings bonds will be awarded to 73 men and prizes will be given to 66 others. Gifts also will be distributed among the winners.

Q. How could hairs get into the carburetor of my car? After cleaning the jets everything is all right, but I don't want a repeat performance.

A. That hair came from the silencing pads of the air cleaner. Paint them with shellac.

Q. What would cause the left front tire on my car to squeal when turning a corner, even though I do not drive fast? Pressures are correct. H. D. Jr.

A. If the tire in question has developed a feather edge this would prevent it from getting a normal grip on the road. But the chances are that the front wheels do not have correct toe-out. It's a case of rechecking the front-end steering geometry.

Q. I've always had very good success with spark plugs but the last set didn't last more than 4,000 miles. Do you think they are being cheapened? Their points seemed to go to pieces. G. K. D.

A. The plugs are all right. It is just that the engine of your car is older and thus runs hotter. You should install a set of cooler plugs of the same make you've always used.

Q. What would cause a fuel pump diaphragm to go bad so frequently? I don't seem to keep a diaphragm more than eight months. J. M.

A. You have a set-up where the pump arm is too long. This gives an excessive stroke and weakens the diaphragm. You can install a pump with a shorter arm.

Q. One cell of my car's battery has gone dead so that it is impossible to bring the thing up to normal charge. Should I have the battery rebuilt? N. N. McB.

A. It would be more satisfactory to buy a new battery. Remember that the other two cells probably are not too far behind the one that has gone bad.

Chapter 24

Connie had backed away from him and now stood staring, one hand grasping the door frame as though for support. "You say it was a broken calf?"

"Yes. On the left hind foot. Why?"

She straightened with something of an effort.

"Nothing. Nothing at all. As you say, Slug was careless; so careless that—"

"That what?"

"Never mind. It was just a crazy idea. Good night, Jeff. Good luck!"

The search was resumed and went doggedly on. The Crown crew joined them and together with Jeff and Glenn and the guards and deputies moved literally foot by foot toward Cougar until fully half the distance had been covered without a sign of the missing box or its thief.

And to Jeff came the growing conviction that they were on the wrong trail entirely. No man could have transported that box this distance in broad daylight and on the back of a horse without being seen by somebody.

He rode swiftly toward Briscoe, then cut away to the west until he found himself on the edge of the steep bank by the creek where the thief had turned the wagon in search of a crossing. It was quite dark by this time, so he got off his horse, dropped the rein, and squatted on his heels to roll and light a cigarette.

Where, he asked himself for the thousandth time could the thief have hidden that box if he hadn't transported it to the Cougar road?

Suddenly he heard the slow thump of hoofs. He put tobacco and papers back into his pocket and sat there listening. The sounds came closer and he finally decided that the horseman was riding directly toward the ford. Presently he saw him—a vague figure a hundred yards off—then lost him as he descended the slope to the stream.

Curious, Jeff got up and started along the bank, following its slant toward the ford. Fifty yards farther on he caught sight of the man. The horse stood on the shore and the man was wading out into the water.

He waded to the middle of the stream, the water coming up to his armpits; then he turned at a right angle and followed the creek in Jeff's direction.

The man stooped, seemed to be feeling about with his feet, then deliberately submerged himself, remaining below the surface so long that Jeff wondered what had become of him. The water rippled and his head came into sight. He erected himself slowly and Jeff saw that he had some very heavy object in his arms.

This man was the gold thief, and the heavy object in his arms as the specie box!

It was clever, devilishly clever, and yet very simple. The wagon had been halted in the middle of the stream where there would be no betraying marks, and the man had taken the box and let it sink some yards away from the crossing. Its weight would hold it there and the grit filled stream would hide it from view. And now he had come for the treasure.

Jeff put on his hat, drew his gun and began inching toward the ford on his stomach.

Jeff heard the harsh rasp of a hacksaw blade. He crept still closer, trusting to the fellow's concentration on his task and the scrapping sound of the blade to cover his movements. He leaped forward, his gun coming up to a level.

"Hold it, Slug!" he said sharply. "Don't move or I'll drop you!"

With a startled gasp the other spun around.

"Get your hands up where I can see them."

Slowly the hands of the other crept up and just as slowly he rose to his feet. In the moonlight he loomed tall and bulky. He was standing with the moon behind him and Jeff could not distinguish his features. A sudden doubt seized Jeff. Something about the figure was wrong, the size, or the shape—

"Step away from the box—I down to the edge of the creek so I can see you."

The man obeyed slowly. Jeff followed him step by step. The other took one final step sideways and the moonlight fell full on his face.

"Glenn!"

Jeff stood there staring, mouth open. The gun dropped slowly until its muzzle was pointed at the ground.

"Glenn! What in the world!"

He stepped forward, overcome with shock and bewilderment and disbelief. And quite suddenly Glenn Gleason leaped to meet him and the right hand which he had lowered came up again in a savage arc. The rock-hard fist caught Jeff squarely on the point of the chin and he went over backwards as though driven by a battering ram. His head struck a corner of the iron bound box and the moonlight abruptly vanished in a pall of darkness.

Chapter 25

Jeff opened his eyes and blinked. He pushed himself to an elbow, only to fall back with a groan of pain. His head was splitting. Then memory returned and he groaned again; and the agony this time was mental rather than physical.

Glenn! Glenn, the boy he had sworn by the memory of his dead mother to guard and cherish and help, had stolen the gold. Glenn, not Slug, had doped the coffee. It was Glenn who had followed them, knowing approximately where they would camp and in what condition he would find them.

Jeff rolled over, getting his hands beneath him. He started to push himself erect only to be arrested by a sudden appalling thought. The one who had stolen the gold had ridden the horse with the broken calf. And the man who rode that horse had killed John Stover!

Shakily he got to his feet and went over to where Glenn's horse had stood. He struck a match and by its light examined the prints in the soft earth. They were quite distinct and perfect in every detail. There was no broken calf.

He felt an instant great relief. Glenn was not a murderer; no matter what else he had done, he had not killed. A new theory began to form in his mind. Glenn and Slug had worked together in the gold theft; Glenn had planned it, and had left its execution to the bolder and more experienced Slug. Glenn had doped the coffee, but Slug had made off with the wagon while they slept. He had dumped the box in the creek, ditched the wagon, then gone on to the rocky flat where Glenn had met him. Assured by Slug that the gold was safe, Glenn had circled to the Cougar trail and himself had awakened Jeff and called his attention to the theft. That had alibied him completely.

This was the only logical explanation that Jeff could find, and although it absolved Glenn of the greater crime of murder, the bitter fact remained that the boy he had helped rear and support and for whom he had made so many uncomplaining sacrifices had repaid his trust and confidences by this stab in the back.

Jeff walked over to the box and picked up the hacksaw blade Glenn had dropped. He turned it over in his hands. Greed had driven Glenn to this; greed and, indirectly, love. He wanted wealth; he was proud and did not want to go to Connie empty handed.

Connie! How would this hit her? If she loved Glenn as the boy had given Jeff reason to believe, it would break her heart.

"Get 'em up, you!"

Jeff stiffened. The voice came from behind him, and in an instant he knew he hadn't a chance. His gun was lying somewhere on the ground. He dropped the blade and slowly raised his hands. He heard the tramp of approaching feet, then a hand felt his empty holster, and ran lightly over the rest of him in search of weapons.

He felt steel on his wrists. The handcuffs snapped shut with a click. "Now turn around and let's have a look at you."

Jeff turned and looked into his face.

Bill was so startled that he took a backward step.

"So you're the bird that swiped the gold! By jacks, I said it was an inside job. Hey, Ed! Hurry down here and see what I got!"

Ed Wade returned leading Jeff's horse. "Holy cow!" he cried. "The boss, Jeff Tyler."

"And now," said Jeff coldly, "since you've had your little joke, you might unlock these cuffs and give me back my gun."

It didn't work.

"I might," answered Bill grimly, "after you've explained the meaning of all this."

"It's plain enough, isn't it? I had a hunch the box had been cached in the creek and—" He broke off abruptly, recognizing the trap into which he had almost walked.

Bill picked him up. "And so you waded into the creek and fished it out. And you did it without gettin' wet. Or did you use a fishin' pole?"

Jeff didn't answer, and Bill went on. "And after you fished it out you just couldn't believe it was the same box, and even if it was still locked you couldn't be sure the gold was still in it. So you got a hacksaw blade that you just happened to have along and sawed it open. That's a lulu, that is! Try tellin' it to twelve good men and true. . . Get on your horse."

Bill picked up his hat and slapped it on his head, then helped him into the saddle. Jeff attempted no further explanation. He couldn't clear himself without telling the whole truth, and that would hurt both Glenn and Connie.

Their arrival at camp created a stir. Men awoke at Bill's shout and gathered to hear his story. Their eyes, fixed on Jeff, reflected first surprise and then contempt. Theft is one thing, disloyalty another; theft combined with disloyalty is lower than the low. Jeb King came and looked hard into Jeff's eyes.

"Tell me it ain't so, Jeff. Tell me if you can."

Jeff said nothing and Jeb turned away. He seemed suddenly weary.

"Hit up the team," he told Jake Wheeler. "You and the guards go after the gold. Take it on to Briscoe. . . Get what rest you can, boys; we'll break camp and start for home come dawn."

It was late in the afternoon when Jeff rode into Cougar with Bill Frothingham and Ed Wade. Word of their coming had preceded them. A crowd met them at the end of Main Street and followed them along the sidewalks to the jail. Threats of lynching were openly made.

"I don't like this, Bill," said Ed Wade as they ascended the stairs to the second floor. "We better swear in some special deputies."

They put Jeff into the cell which was once occupied by Slug Benjamin, and he made one request before they left him.

Jeff went over and sat down on the iron bunk.

"Get word to Glenn Gleason that I must talk with him."

"I'll think it over," said Frothingham solemnly. "Rememberin' what happened when he called on Slug, I ain't so sure I want him here."

Jeff sat on his bunk in the Town Hall jail. There had been no visitors. Jeff was forced to the conclusion that Frothingham had not delivered his message to Glenn; and, as he thought over his own precarious position, even his courageous nature came to despair.

If Glenn would only come! He could assure the boy that his secret was safe and have him change the shoes on his horse. Then he could tell about those tracks on the creek bank, could prove by them that another was present and at least raise some doubt as to his own guilt.

When one got right down to the heart of the problem, it was plain to see that Slug Benjamin held the key. Force the truth from Slug and the pendulum of public opinion must swing abruptly the other way. But the search for Slug would be neglected now, abandoned perhaps, because men thought that they had the culprit safe. Their sympathy would be with Slug as a man who had borne the stigma of another's misdeeds.

He heard the grate of a key in the lock. Ed Wade came in, gun in hand, looked sharply at Jeff, then came over and tested the cell door. It rattled, but was securely locked. Ed let his gaze roam over the interior of the cell, then turned away.

Jeff said, "Did Bill get word to Glenn yet?"

"Bill's been right busy. There was a mob outside yellin' for your blood and for a while it looked like they might get it."

"I've got to see Glenn. Ed, get word to him just as quick as you can."

"I'll tell Bill," promised Wade, and went out.

He heard a little ping as a stone came through, and he caught it before it could strike the floor. Tied about it was a string.

He drew in the string, turning his head and cocking his ears toward the door. He saw that something tied to it had caught against the bars. It was the blade of a hacksaw!

Jeff kept hauling in the string, winding it about his hand as he did so. The other end was tied through the honda of a lariat. This too he drew into the cell, coiling it swiftly. Climbing up on the bunk, he went to work. There was no time to work cautiously; he had to get out of there before the mob returned. He sawed through four of the bars close to the lower sill, then almost through the four near the top of the window. Strong, steady pulls on the nearly severed bars broke them off with but little noise. The rope was a forty-foot one; he slid the ends one on each side of a sound bar and paid out the slack until it was all gone. Rolling the string into a wad, he put it into a pocket with the stone. The blade he stuck beneath his shirt. He slid to the ground, landing in the dark alley. He pulled on one end of the lariat and the rope came free of the bar and fell at his feet.

A vague shadow stood near him. The shadow spoke in a low voice. "Come along and make it quiet!"

Jeff sucked in his breath sharply. Chuck Gale!

He followed the other across the alley and into the stable. Clear to the far end they walked. Another shadow glided from the last stall.

"Jeff!"

The second shadow hurried itself at him and he automatically opened his arms to receive it.

"Connie! What in the world are you doing here?"

"Chuck's horse is in that stall. There's a ride and blanket roll on the saddle. Go, Jeff. Don't wait."

Connie and Chuck had gone to the front of the stable and were talking in low tones. He couldn't hear what they said. He waited.

Connie had told him to go, but he wanted to talk to her again.

Chuck was standing just inside the front entrance, his hawklike gaze on the blackness outside, when she joined him.

"He gone?" Chuck asked without turning.

"I told him not to wait."

MISS HUFF TO

quet of assorted flowers. Nancy Huff, a sister of the bride, will serve as flower girl. She will wear a white street length dress. Paul and Spencer Huff, brothers of the bride, will serve as ushers.

The church will be decorated with cut spring flowers. Prior to the ceremony there will be 15 minutes of music including "Oh Promise Me" on the organ by Miss Shirley Goebrecht, organist, and two solos by James Motter, "Because" and "I Love You Truly." The traditional wedding marches will be played and during the ceremony Mr. Motter will sing "The Lord's Prayer."

Reception to Follow

Following the ceremony, there will be a reception at the bride's home, when a three tier wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom will occupy the center of the reception table.

After the reception, they will leave on a two week's wedding trip to an unannounced destination. The bride's going away dress will be of aqua taffeta.

The bride graduated from Littlestown high school in the class of 1949. The groom graduated from Taneytown high school in the class of 1945 and is employed by the Littlestown Hardware and Foundry company. He served 19 months in the United States Infantry during World War II, twelve months of which was in the Pacific theatre.

Upon their return, they will reside at their new home in Germany township, Littlestown R. 1.

Scout Troop 76

store equipment and tools, and there can be no decoration of rooms according to scout ideas because the rooms must also be used by a number of other organizations," the Rev. Mr. Carroll pointed out.

"In addition, a scout troop with its own structure can meet when convenient, can carry on a number of craft and other activities, can permit such activities as games, carpentering and the like. When it must share a room with other organizations and meet only at times when the room is not used by other groups, then half the benefits of scouting are lost."

"Therefore," the Rev. Mr. Carroll points out, "when we saw an opportunity to rent a lot and buy a building to put on it we went ahead on faith."

The lot was inexpensive. J. I. Burgoon, head of Burgoon and Yingling processing plant, leased the land for 99 years for $1. Attorney Daniel E. Teeter drew up the deed free of charge. Mr. Teeter is an officer of the Black Walnut scout district.

To secure the building the committee bid $455.55 and then borrowed the money to make good on the bid.

The committee had hoped to seek donations from various individuals to pay off the $455 and the additional sums needed for nails, screws, roofing and the like needed in the construction, and to pay the carpenters.

When the committee asked for donations it ran into the trouble with the Community Chest, the Rev. Mr. Carroll relates.

"A Whale Of A Price"

Businessmen met the request for donations with the answer: "that's all taken care of, we gave our money for the Boy Scouts to the Community Chest." The Rev. Mr. Carroll says the merchants were surprised to learn that the entire $2,150 given by the town through the community chest for Boy Scouting goes entirely to the York office of the scouts and that none of it is available for purposes such as the construction of a building for an individual scout troop.

As the Methodist pastor put it: "While it is true we must have a national set-up of Boy Scouts, it seems to me $2,150 is a whale of a price to pay for as little as we receive in direct supervision in Gettysburg."

The Rev. Mr. Carroll argues that the money raised for scouting through Community Chest should go partially toward support of the York office of scouting, to provide for the overall work, office expenses, supervision and the like, but that at least some of the money should be retained for Gettysburg uses.

Serve Without Pay
